

Have you ever heard somebody say they know it's going to rain because their joints hurt?

Cloudy with a Chance of Pain is a national smartphone study investigating the relationship between the weather and chronic pain.

For over 2000 years people have wondered at whether there is a connection, and, if so, what the nature of this relationship is. Now, for the first time, smartphone technology means that we have the opportunity to explore this properly.

Who can join?

You can sign up to the study if you:

- Have experienced pain for three or more months
- Live in the UK
- Own a smartphone
- Are over the age of 17

What does participating involve?

We ask that you track your symptoms each day for six months on our smartphone app.

At the moment that you save your symptoms your phone's GPS will capture information about the local weather.

How do I sign up?

You can find out more and sign up to the study on our website:

www.cloudywithachanceofpain.com